Coast Introduces New Headlamps for the Outdoor Market
From hunters to joggers, Coast headlamps have all needs covered

Portland, OR: Coast Products announced today that it has four new headlamps available. These new lights expand the Coast line of LED headlamps to include a light perfect for every hands-free activity.

The Double Barrel Headlamp (LL7450) builds off the phenomenal success of the Coast Power Chip Headlamp (LL7455) and improves upon it. Customer feedback on the Power Chip headlamp has been great since its introduction. Users really loved the super-bright beam in the Power Chip, but it was simply too bright at times, especially for activities that require light close to the user, such as reading or around camp. As a result we have added a second, smaller light to the Power Chip headlamp. This second light has its own separate switch that allows it to be used entirely on its own. The smaller light is a "moon" lens, meaning the light is a perfect circle with no hot spots or dark areas.

Coast has also introduced two new dual color headlamps, one with one green and five white LEDs and one with one red and five white LEDs. The LL7536GHL is a perfect headlamp for hunters. The green LED will preserve a users night vision and will not spook game. The LL7536RHL has a red LED that will also preserve the users night vision, but can also be used as a signal light. Separate switches allow the white or colored LEDs to be used separately or at the same time.

Coast other new light is also its smallest headlamp. The Jogger's Headlamp is specifically designed for runners to wear at night, but it is also a great all-round mini-headlamp. With one super bright LED in the front and two blue LEDs in the back the headlamp provides great visibility from all directions. The white LED in front is also a great light for activities that require a small amount of light in a close area.
